

Elliot Moon

Elliott was born and raised in Dallas, Texas, which is where his love of music began. He has been involved with music on a consistent basis for 30 of his 37 years of life. Most of it spent playing drums to some capacity, but on many other levels as well.

In Texas, Elliott was a product of very well established music program in his public school where he learned the basics and spent most of his time falling in love with marching percussion. After graduating from high school, he went to Samford University in Birmingham Alabama, and it was there that his music would take a turn. Instead of the organized music of his formative days, he began to play drums in different bands that were traveling and ministering to students around the country. This is when he began to see that even as a drummer, there was incredible opportunity to pour his life into others, and that worship music could sound, feel and look different than the small box he had seen it in for so long.

After graduating from Samford, he moved to Atlanta where he was on staff at Dunwoody Baptist Church as the Technical Director. A valuable experience for him to be on the other side of the music, where he learned that it takes both sides, the musical , and the technical to work together to be effective.

At the end of his year at Dunwoody Baptist, he entered into the next phase of learning and life experience when he starting traveling with different artists on the singer/songwriter circuit and traveling around the country doing shows in clubs and smaller listening venues. Soon after, he starting playing with a worship band led by Steve Fee and Candi Pearson Shelton. There he would find himself for the next 6 years being the drummer on the road leading worship with them. They led worship for, and were part of many different organizations such as Passion Conferences, 7:22 bible study in Atlanta, Campus Crusade, Campus Outreach, Navigators, and many more. Elliott has also spent time performing with Aaron Keyes, Aaron Shust, Laura Story, and Bo Bice to name a few.

BA
Samford University
Birmingham, AL

Elliott came to realize that music was a vehicle for relationship for him. He was a pastor at heart and loved the people that music provided the opportunity to meet. He loved equipping a church to do what they did better, and he loved encouraging young drummers he met on the road. So it was not a stretch when North Point Community Church asked him to be the new Music Director at their Browns Bridge Campus that they were about to launch. Elliott has now been off the road and on staff at Browns Bridge for 6 years and spends his time leading the musicians spiritually and musically.

Elliott is married to Cori Moon, and has 3 daughters, Sophie, Lilli, and Ruby and live in Alpharetta. When Elliott is not doing music some where, in some capacity, he can either be found enjoying some ice cream with his family, or out cycling trying to work it off.

