I am thrilled to be a part of Legacy. My family and I have been involved with the community of Legacy over the course of many years as we have homeschooled our own children. We have had the privilege of not only witnessing, but being a part of God's beautiful handiwork as He has gently molded and shaped what was once a simple Science class taught by Joe and Nell Estes from their garage, into the resplendent and well-composed work of art it is today.

It was in high school that I truly began to see God working in my life through education. He guided my path to countless situations involving the teaching of children long before I made it my profession. I have taught in a number of settings, including both private and public school. But my favorite teaching position has been that of homeschooling my own children for the past 12 years. Some of my happiest memories are of my brood gathered together on a picnic blanket in the back yard, the oldest to the youngest, sharing the joy of each other's company while being under the spell of a great novel; hanging on its every word. I look forward to continuing that journey by helping Legacy students discover the abundant blessings and multitude of possibilities that God has planned for their lives through the use of a solid educational experience.
