

Your Word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path

Psalm 119: 105

“The Yearly Bible Calendar” was arranged by Henry Groves. The following is a portion of his preface to this reading program.

The Arrangement

The Old Testament has been divided into two parts, the portion from each of which can be read each day, for those who are able to do so; while those with little time can read one part each year. The New Testament is carried through the whole year, and each daily portion contains only an average of twenty-five verses, and should be read by every Christian, so as to secure the reading of the New Testament once a year.

The Order of the Books

The Old Testament, Part I, embraces the Pentateuch and the historical books, in the order in which they stand in our Bible.

The Old Testament, Part II, contains the five didactic books: Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon; and all the prophetic books. These are placed in their chronological order, a matter often of much importance.

The prophets divide themselves into three divisions: first, the prophets of the Assyrian period; secondly, those of the Babylonian era; and, thirdly, those of the Persian period subsequent to the restoration of Judah.

In regard to Jeremiah a special note is needed. It will be observed by a comparison of the dates given in the book, that the chapters following the twentieth are not in chronological order. How this disarrangement arose, we know not; but as the means of rectification are found in the chapters themselves, there is no difficulty in readjusting them. This has been done, and great light is thrown on many parts of the history in consequence.

In the New Testament, the four gospels are separated from one another, so that the life of our Lord may be more continually before the mind during the year. Matthew is followed by the Acts of the Apostles, connecting together the coming of the King, His rejection, and the calling out of His Church. The gospel of Mark (Peter's son in the faith) is named the “Petrine Gospel,” and the Jewish epistles – that is, those of Peter, James, and Jude – are placed after it. Luke's gospel, named the “Pauline Gospel,” is followed by the epistles of Paul, arranged in chronological order. And, lastly, the gospel of John is connected with the other writings of the same apostle. Thus the whole is divided into four parts.
