A NOTE TO POTENTIAL PARTICIPANTS

You probably should not consider attending this year's marriage retreat. It costs too much money; takes too much effort to plan to be away from the home and office for a few days; it is impossible to work out the details of finding a sitter for the kids; and who wants to sit for a couple of days getting jabbed in the ribs by your spouse as they give you the "I told you it was your fault" look? It's all the same-old, same-old anyway. Respect him. Love her. Communicate more. Listen better. Focus on his needs. Make sure her needs are met. Submit to one another. Blah, blah, blah. . . . Of course, there will probably be updated statistics on how marriages in the church are failing, the warnings that we better be proactive with our own marriages, and the myriad of worksheets, checklists, and routines we need to complete so that we don't wind up being a statistic too. And we pay how much for all this?

So, don't come. This marriage retreat is most definitely not for you. Because the dirty little secret in most Christian marriages is that our intimacy, sex, and romance is subpar, and that many Christian husbands and wives are not satisfied with this personal and private aspect of their marriages. He wants more sex. She wants more intimacy. And who has time for romance anyway! But, this probably doesn't concern you.

So, instead of throwing away this brochure, go find a couple who values their marriage and give it to them. Find that couple who wants to grow in their relationship with each other. Who cares about overcoming the challenges of being more intimate with one another while dealing with the stresses and schedules of life. Find that couple who wants to enjoy all that God has designed marriage to be—including intimacy, sex, and romance. Then, give them this brochure.

By the way (in case you were wondering), studying through the Song of Solomon is most definitely not your same-old, same-old marriage retreat. Even if it was, isn't a weekend about intimacy, sex, and romance better than a weekend at home thinking about intimacy, sex, and romance? Just a thought. Come, check it out! We hope to see you there!
