God as Master Artist

Charles Spurgeon talks about God's creation. He says here:
 I must confess that I think it a most right and excellent thing that you and I should rejoice in the natural creation of God."

"One of the purest and most innocent of joys, apart from spiritual things, in which a man can indulge is a joy in the works of God."

"I like to see my Savior on the hills and by the shores of the sea. I hear my Father's voice in the thunder and listen to the whispers of his love in the cadence of the sunlit waves. These are my Father's works, and therefore I admire them. I seem all the nearer to him when I am among them."

"If I were a great artist, I should think it a very small compliment if my son came into my house and said he would not notice the pictures I had painted because he only wanted to think of me. In doing so he would condemn my paintings, for if they were good for anything, he would rejoice to see my hand in them. Oh, but surely everything that comes from the hand of such a master artist as God has something of himself in it! The Lord rejoices in his works, shouldn't his people do so?"

"There are lovely spots on this fair globe which ought to make even a blasphemous devout. I have said, among the mountains, 'He who sees no God here is mad.' There are things that God has made which overwhelm with a sense of his omnipotence: how can men see them and doubt the existence of the Deity? Whether you consider the anatomy of the body or the arrangement of the mighty heavens, you wonder that the scorner does not bow his head - at least in silence - and own up to the infinite supremacy of God."

I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just and that his justice cannot sleep forever. ~ Thomas Jefferson
