Dr. Daryl Merrill Jr.

In an issue of Guideposts Magazine, Joel Osteen shared his prescription for stronger families. With so many pressures pulling families apart these days, let's look at these practical suggestions that can lead to having a strong, successful family.

Show up. Life is busy but family members need to show up for each other. They go to the game, the recital, the play, the open house. They show up for dinner. Whether in the big things or little, stay close to the people God has put in your life.

Don't keep up with the Joneses. Try to be the best parent you can be, but remember, its not a competition. Stop comparing yourself to imaginary rivals. Pray for wisdom and strength and do your best!

Have fun together. Couples and families that laugh together stay together. When was the last time your family had fun together? It doesn't have to be a big deal or cost a lot of money. Be creative and have some fun!

Pick your battles. Being stubborn or unreasonable will kill any relationship. When in that battle about your pet peeve ask yourself, "Is this really important? Is it worth the fight?" How much tension are you bringing into your home unnecessarily? You may win the fight but will it be worth the stress?

Spell it out. Every day tell your spouse, your children, those who mean the most to you, how much you love them. Sometimes we make the mistake of thinking our families know we love them. No matter how busy you are take a break, make that call, send that note, do something to let your family know you love them.

Decisions about your spiritual commitment

- I made a decision today to follow Jesus for the first time.
- I'm already a Christian, but I want to recommit my life to Jesus.
- I would like to be contacted about serving in a ministry at CLC.
