HAPPY FATHER'S DAY!

Godly Fatherhood by Example

BY KNEELAND BROWN

WHEN MY WIFE AND I PURCHASED OUR FIRST HOME, OUR NEXT-door neighbor was an unexpected blessing. If you were working on a project, Vince would loan the tool you needed, and stop by to make sure you knew how to use it. When you went out of town, Vince would watch your house and make sure newspapers didn't pile up in the driveway.

When Vince interacted with his wife and daughters, he was always kind and compassionate. He lit up whenever he spoke about his family and was present for every school event. When my wife and I were expecting our first child, Vince shared a kind yet stern warning: "They grow up fast; spend time with your children so you don't have any regrets."

We no longer live next to Vince, but his actions of love still resonate deeply with me—a love that is patient, kind, protecting, trusting, hoping and preserving.

As we go about the daily duties of fatherhood and husbandry, it is important for us to remember as men that others are watching us. In dutifully demonstrating actions of love, we make our lives a living testimony of godly fatherhood in a world where many men need an example to follow.

TOUGH QUESTIONS FROM KIDS

Why doesn't
God take us to heaven as soon as we get saved?

Answer on back

Faith Basics for Kids

It's not an easy task to raise kids in the Christian faith. The world seems determined to undermine the principles of the Gospel. In schools, in entertainment, in culture—our kids confront messages that contradict what they're learning at home and in church, whether it's in beliefs about life and its origins, morality, the design of the family or lifestyle choices. Our Enemy has a clear objective: to erase truth from our kids' minds and pull them away from the path God has for their lives.

How can we better equip our kids to have a thriving faith in today's world? I believe we must help our children develop a deeper understanding of the core principles of Christianity.

Consider the example of the Secret Service and its charge to protect our nation's currency system from forgery. As agents are trained, they examine genuine currency to a degree that they become so intimately familiar with the authentic item that they can immediately spot a fake. In the same way, if the core truths of Christianity are deeply sown into the hearts and minds of our kids, they'll be better able to recognize false messages when they see them.

What's more, these core truths help our kids understand the culture they live in. The Gospel is not so much in conflict with this world as it is made precisely for this world.

God's Word is the best place to begin exploring the core truths of the faith. The Bible is not a collection of unconnected stories, but rather one grand story of God's design and pursuit of humanity. Help your kids see the big picture winding throughout all the pages of Scripture. —Alex McFarland

Family Dinner Nights

Want a strong, healthy family? It's easier than you might think. By having regular family dinner nights, you and your kids can grow closer than you ever thought possible. Start today with one of these ideas:

- Have a parents vs. kids cook-off.
- Eat medieval style—no silverware!
- Eat your foods in alphabetical order.

Find dinner tips, recipes and more at Facebook.com/MakeEveryDayCount.

Humor in Marriage

In recent years, my husband and I have discovered that we have to work harder at laughing together. If you're like us and want to put the laughter back in your marriage, the following ideas may be a good place to start:

Share inside jokes.

The funny moments and sayings understood between only you and your spouse are a special part of what makes you a couple.

For the first six months of our marriage, every time my husband left the house he yelled, "Shut the door!" Strange. So one day I asked why he was reminding me to shut the door. He looked puzzled, and then it dawned on him: He was actually saying, "Je t'adore"—a French expression meaning "I love you." Now when we sign a card or leave a note for each other, we write, "Shut the door!"

Surprise your spouse. Some of the best laughs come when least expected. Slip your spouse a fun note, or declare your love in a creative way.

Recently, Roger found a unique way to make us both smile. He knew I was facing a tough day, but he had to leave for work before I got up. Still, he made me laugh. How? It was the "I Love You, Baby!" note leaned up against the coffee maker. I couldn't help but whoop with laughter when I saw it—because it was written on a banana!

Make time to laugh.

Activities that involve letting your guard down and playing together are a great way to infuse laughter into your marriage. But be warned: It's easy to lose sight of laughter when everything is a competition.

So mix it up!

The goal isn't to be a professional mini-golfer or set the record at Nintendo Wii Hula Hooping. The object is to laugh together in a nonthreatening environment, one without winners or losers. Maybe try a cooking class or take dance lessons. (The only loser will be the one who gets her toes stepped on the most.) —Kathi Lipp

Family Matters

Answers to your questions . . .

As a father, what should I make sure to teach my son before he grows up and leaves home?

Answer: Discern your child's design and then encourage the support and development of that natural gifting. Don't try to make him something he's not.

Read books to your boy that carry strong moral messages. Bible stories are foundational. If you read to your son early and make it fun, he will read for a lifetime.

Teach your teenage son about relating to women, both socially and sexually. Perhaps other dads will join you with their sons for a series of group discussions on this essential subject. It is critically important that boys be told about their role and responsibilities in regard to young women now and in a future marriage relationship.

Teach your son generosity. Show him what you give to the church monthly. Explain why you do this. Show him what you give to charities. Take him with you on church and community service projects, mission trips and the like. Teach him that he, like you, should tithe a portion of his time, money and talents to others.

Protect your son in his preteen years from the negative influence of television and movies. Set high standards for yourself and for him as an adolescent concerning media influences—and explain why! The more you model this for him, the more he will follow your lead.

Establish a work ethic in your son by tying his allowance to specific chores around the house and performance at school. During his teenage years, require your son to find some kind of summer job.

TOUGH QUESTIONS FROM KIDS

Answer:

God doesn't take His people to heaven right away because He wants them to grow in their faith. He also wants them to tell others about Christ, to help others and to make the world better. God has work for His people to do.

FATHER'S DAY ... DID YOU KNOW?

In 1924 President Calvin Coolidge proclaimed the third Sunday in June as “Father's Day.” The idea for creating such a day began in Spokane, Washington, back in 1909! Sonora Smart Dodd thought of the idea while listening to a Mother's Day sermon. She had been raised by her selfless father after her mother had died. Her father's birthday was in June, so she chose to hold the first Father's Day celebration in Spokane on June 9, 1910.

Summer is a perfect time to give someone a Gospel tract! Tracts are available for you at the Welcome Desk in the foyer.

A list of June birthdays and anniversaries of regular-attenders of Grace Bible is on the kitchen door. Please make (legible) corrections/additions right on the list. Thank you!

This Week in Church History...

On June 17, 1963, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that classroom prayer and Bible reading in the public schools was unconstitutional. (...And you know the "rest of the story!")
