

THE TIGER TALK

This summer, I had the privilege to study abroad in Germany. Over the course of six weeks, I made some amazing friends, visited nine gorgeous cities, and was able to completely immerse myself in the culture that I was studying. It sounds so cliché to say, but this experience was truly life changing. It was the best summer of my life- in spite of the amount of schoolwork I actually had to do.

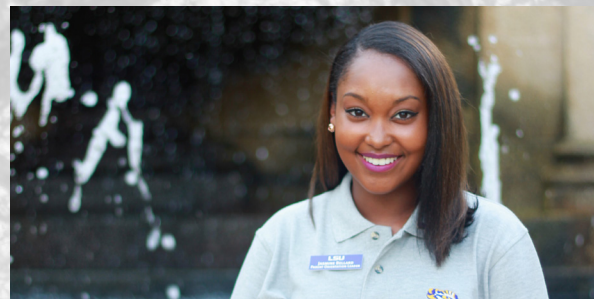

Seriously, anyone who is thinking about studying abroad should do it, it is a decision you will never regret.

Jen Vuillemot

Being an Orientation Leader this summer was full of surprises. From late night chats with random members on my team, to the first time I had a genuine interaction with a student, I would not trade this summer for the world. FOAP planted the seeds to succeed as a student leader and really as a person. I know this all probably sounds very cliché, but I promise FOAP is everything and then some.

Aiden Craver, Orientation Leader

Choosing to spend my summer in grey was the perfect way to jumpstart my AMB career. I loved every second of being a Parent Orientation Leader. Not only do I have wonderful memories to cherish, I also have work experiences under my belt. Often times dealing with parents is depicted as being horrid; however, when you are dealing with LSU tiger parents nothing can go wrong. Helping parents allow their tiger to grow, mature, and use resources on campus was the highlight of my summer.

Jasmine Bellard, Parent Orientation Leader

Connor's Corner

Hello LSU Ambassadors! I hope each and every one of you had a wonderful summer break! I know I sure did. The Orientation Leaders and the Office of Orientation kept me busy this summer, but it was definitely one of the most exciting and rewarding summers of my life.

GA update #1: Unfortunately, I have class from 4:30 to 7:30 PM on Wednesdays this semester. It is a research and methods class, so I get to learn all about those fun things! This means I won't be able to make it to every General Meeting this semester (cue sad noises and hysterical crying...NOW!) My office hours are posted on Moodle, and you all are welcome to stop by any time to chat, catch up, or grab some candy out of my new candy jar (a birthday present from Kelli). I'll still be seeing you all at Buddy Walk and other AMB events, so don't worry!

GA update #2: I've decided to start calling the students I work with "potatoes" (that means you all are now potatoes). The reason for this new nickname is because potatoes can sometimes be spicy and sometimes be sweet. However, the real reason I now call you all potatoes is because each and every one of you has potential, just like a good ole potato. You can be anything you want to be, kind of like how a potato can be a pile of French fries, a bowl of mashed potatoes, etc. So, remember your potential as you begin this semester. It may be rough getting back into the swing of things, but remember you are all so capable and so wonderful and will rock this semester! Welcome back to campus, welcome back to class, and welcome back to General Meetings!

Thanks!

Connor James

Upcoming Dates:

August 31st
Table Sits
Membership Apps Due @ 4:30
September 2nd
Table Sits
Membership Training 1
September 6th
Info Meeting
Table Sits
September 7th
Info Meeting
Table Sits
September 8th
Info Meeting
Table Sits
Address Updates Due

Take Note:
