Oboe, Woodwinds

Marie Charmaine Trudeau is a native of the Midwest who recently moved to New Jersey for a teaching assistantship at the Mason Gross School of the Arts where she is pursuing a doctorate on oboe. Previous to that she attended the Cleveland Institute of Music for her masters and Michigan State University for a bachelors degree.

As a chamber music enthusiast, Marie has had many invites to perform in small orchestras and chamber groups all around the Midwest, Los Angeles, and now New Jersey. She has also performed several world premieres and is constantly seeking new and exciting music to bring to fruition. In addition to school groups and chamber ensembles, Marie has performed with orchestras such as the Jackson Symphony, Akron Symphony and Opera Circle in Cleveland. She had also performed with or been under the direction of such great musicians as Leonard Slatkin, Midori, Thomas Wilkins, and Itzhak Perlman.

An affinity for teaching has led her to find extensive amounts of experience in the realm of private lessons, coaching and mentoring youth orchestras. Marie taught at music stores and school districts while attending school and was given the position of mentor for the Detroit Symphony Civic Youth Ensembles. At Rutgers, Marie's assistantship allows her the opportunity to lead the Sinfonia Orchestra winds by participating in rehearsals and coaching sectionals.
