

NONE BUT TEXIANS

A History of Terry's Texas Rangers
By Jeffrey D. Murrah

A most intriguing history of a most interesting group. Mr. Murrah, a sixth generation Texan, is descended from the Green Dewitt colonists of Gonzales County, Texas. Fueled by an avid interest in history, and especially the State of Texas, he found a relative of his in the famous all Texian unit, Terry's Texas Rangers.

Clyde N. Wilson, a professor of history at the University of South Carolina, states, "What is really special about this regimental history is that it shows us who this band of brothers really was and why they fought." If you are a "Texian" you will especially enjoy the last chapter. The frustration and ineptness of union cavalry General Hugh Judson Kilpatrick, a special friend of General Sherman's, is evident in his inability to stop the Texans or worse, capture any so that he could hang them. Sherman liked Kilpatrick because, "...he's just dumb enough to do what I tell him..."

None but Texians – the first to get there and the last to leave!
