

FPCWV Capitol Update

Nothing much happens the first week or two of every legislative session. But, one thing is very clear so far: lawmakers want to focus on the economy.

What is often left behind are the “social issues” of life, marriage, and religious freedom. Sometimes that is because more liberal politicians do not want to see the reduction of abortion or would rather redefine marriage than strengthen it. Other, more conservative politicians, seem to think that the social issues are largely solved simply by focusing on increasing securing a free market.

They're both wrong.

Many of the economic problems we face today can be helped if politicians would prioritize the strengthening the family. That is where your partnership with us comes in.

While the Family Policy Council of West Virginia works to advocate for policies that embrace the sanctity of human life, enrich marriage, and safeguard religious freedom at the legislature, we need you to remind those you have elected to serve that you want them to protect innocent human life, strengthen marriage, and protect your right to life, learn, and do business according to your faith.

At FamilyPolicyWV.com/Action, you can:

- Find the contact information for your leaders,
- Watch Jeremy Dys, our president, explain the difference between economic and social issues, and
- Invest in the work that the Family Policy Council of WV is doing on your behalf.

FPCWV Capitol Update

Nothing much happens the first week or two of every legislative session. But, one thing is very clear so far: lawmakers want to focus on the economy.

What is often left behind are the “social issues” of life, marriage, and religious freedom. Sometimes that is because more liberal politicians do not want to see the reduction of abortion or would rather redefine marriage than strengthen it. Other, more conservative politicians, seem to think that the social issues are largely solved simply by focusing on increasing securing a free market.

They're both wrong.

Many of the economic problems we face today can be helped if politicians would prioritize the strengthening the family. That is where your partnership with us comes in.

While the Family Policy Council of West Virginia works to advocate for policies that embrace the sanctity of human life, enrich marriage, and safeguard religious freedom at the legislature, we need you to remind those you have elected to serve that you want them to protect innocent human life, strengthen marriage, and protect your right to life, learn, and do business according to your faith.

At FamilyPolicyWV.com/Action, you can:

- Find the contact information for your leaders,
- Watch Jeremy Dys, our president, explain the difference between economic and social issues, and
- Invest in the work that the Family Policy Council of WV is doing on your behalf.