

A Christian World View

Holding to the existence of a personal, loving and all-powerful God Who created everything from nothing.

Holding to an absolute moral code based upon the very nature of God and revealed by Him as the standard by which all moral judgments are to be made.

Holding to the literalness of the Genesis account of creation.

Holding to Adam as the source of all mankind and, therefore, the fall of all mankind in him.

Holding to a divinely created order for the roles of man and woman, in the home, church, and society.

Holding to the reality of the universal flood of Noah's day.

Holding to the Tower of Babel event as the reason for ethnicity and the multiplicity of human languages.

Holding to the inerrancy, infallibility and inspiration of the Scriptures.

Holding to the triunity of the Godhead.

Holding to the full deity and true humanity of Christ.

Holding to the life, death, burial and resurrection of Christ as the only means of salvation from the wrath of God.

Holding to the salvation offered by God to man as being wholly by the grace of God through faith in the merits of Christ.

Holding to the soon return of Christ to set up His everlasting kingdom after He has put down all rebellion.

Holding to an everlasting afterlife, with God, of all the saved of mankind.
