Especially if helping the poor is new for you or you realize that it's an area where you need to grow, there are opportunities all around us to get started. You'll see them through Vision or maybe through your work. As you listen to the radio you'll hear Public Service Announcements from different charities here in town. A Google search will quickly put lots of great connections right in front of you. Even if it's not an organization, just deciding to become more sensitive to the needs of others around you, you'll become aware of neighbors who have needs. To develop a heart to help the poor, take action and the heart will follow. Chances are, the experience will generate a desire to do it even more. And even if your action doesn't go great every time, continue to look for opportunities to help the poor around you. You'll have really meaningful, deepening experiences.
