

Finding God

I wanted to share my experience of finding God. I don't come from a religious background, quite the opposite in fact. But I realise now God has been reaching out to me for some time in different ways. The turning point was the death of my father last May which left me in emotional turmoil looking for a way to make sense of it all. After a conversation with a good friend of mine I went to Windsor Park. My first visit was very emotional and I spent most of the time crying. It was like a light going on in my head and joy exploding in my heart. A release, joy, peace. I have found something life changing. It isn't easy to follow Jesus and I know it will always be a challenge, especially as my husband is not Christian, although he is supportive. However, this is a personal journey and it makes sense to me, I just wish I'd gotten to this place sooner. I thank God for being patient and waiting for me to finally listen to him! He has changed my life so much in such a short period of time and I'm excited about what he has in store for me in the future.
